PRICE FIVE CENTS.

From Yesterday's Evening Edition.

ATLANTA, MARCH 6, 1873.

Sad Accident.

On Saturday night, about four miles from Gainesville, five negroes were crossing the Chattahochee River in a boat, about half a mile above Thompson's Ferry, when the boat upset, and four of the number were drowned. One man and three women. The bodies had not been recovered the last we heard from them. One of the party, a man, was saved.

Summary of State News.

MACON.

St. Patrick's day will be duly celebrated in Macon. Grand parade of the Hibernians, a speech, a grand ball at Ayer's Hall, and a supper at the Lanier House.——Macon sports a silver spangled Poland rooster, weighing eighteen pounds and has ten toes on each foot.——Hard times and no money, is the cry among Macon merchants.——The City Bank building is completed.——Barret lost money in Macon.——Mr. Tyler Southal is very ill at the Floyd House.——First Assistant Chief Engineer G. D. Lawrence, of the Macon Fire Department, is very sick.—Enterprise.

AUGUSTA.

Not less than twenty fatal cases of meningitis have occurred in Cuthbert, eleven in two days.——We have had another week of unfavorable weather for planting operations. We fear our planters will be late pitching their crops.—Republican.

FORSYTH.

Six jurors were fined for failing to be promt Monday morning, in the sum of $40 each.——Rev. W. J. Morcock, living about two miles from Forsyth, had his corn crib, containing several hundred pounds of fodder, ten or fifteen bushels of peas, some cotton seed, a lot of long forage, and an almost new Woodruff wagon burned a few nights since.——Mr. Jeff Bazemore made, last year, eight bales of cotton to the mule, and corn, wheat, oats, peas, potatoes, meat, etc., enough to serve his farm for twelve months.—Monroe Advertiser.

☞A traveler in Russia relates that he saw a votary of the Greek Church devoutly telling his beads with one hand, and with other deliberately picking the pocket of a fellow-worshiper.

FASHIONS FOR MARCH.

The Close of the Season.

Ritualism and Rationalism in Dress.

HIGH ART IN FURNISHING.

Fresh Spring Styles.

From our own Correspondent.]

If winter has not gone, Lent has come, and the voice of pleasure is no longer heard in the land. Housekeepers are glad of a rest, or of an opportunity to prepare spring clothing. So, whether high church or low church, they accept Lent with contentment if not satisfaction, and close their doors to all but their friends and the regulation "calls."

Quite a notable winter has this one been of 1872-73. Severe as to cold and storms, prolific in lectures and entertainments of all kinds, but hard on all dependent creatures, and more agreeable to the greatest and best among us in promise than in performance.

The truth is the whole world is bent on finding pleasure instead of performing, and so even our pleasures halt for want of a leg or a crutch to stand upon.

Among the genuine successes of the season may be mentioned the ladies' reception, given by the artists and literary clubs. With none of the stiffness or formality of the "party," they brought together nearly all the men and women known in art or literature, and mingling a regular programme of amusement with the charms of music and conversation, contrived afternoon and evening entertainments, which it is probable will lead to the realization of that dream of the future—a men's and women's club.

The cordial greeting extended to Miss Faithfull, in New York and elsewhere, has been supplemented by letters received from different parts of the country, entreating her to stay longer, and as far as possible complete the good work she has begun. Her earnestness and sincerity of purpose have made the best possible impression, while her devotion to her work is in marked contrast to the glorification of self which distinguishes so many of our leaders.

THE GROWTH OF RITUALISM.

The High Church furore, which is partly the outgrowth of European travel, partly a lack of other resources, has seized many young ladies with alarming vigor. It does not make them more industrious, or less given to gossip, so far as I know, but it sets them to studying up mediæval costumes, and induces them to put their pocket money in huge black crosses and jet beads of corresponding dimensions.

It sets them to embroidering alter cloths and chill black cashmere for church use and church wear, and adds to the risk of fire insurance by setting up wax candles flanked by images and pictures, in dark corners where "paper" will not be apt to discover them. These interesting devotees who try the effects of long, plain, nansook confirmation dresses before the glass, and contrast their black drapery with the finest folds of white lisse and delicate muslin, are in direct opposition to the practical or rationalistic woman who will hear of nothing but plain business suits, like those of men, and a permanent form to ordinary dress which will admit of women doing something besides make, cut down, lengthen out and alter-over skirts and over-skirts.

Nor is it quite certain who will get the best of it. Business women are getting to be a power in the community. Other women envy them their independency, their pluck, their daring, their success. The "I" "I" toward which everything is tending, is pleased and excited and the mania spreads until it is likely to infect all classes of society. Women are no longer satisfied with rank and fine clothes. Queens write books and receive their percentage like ordinary mortals; and princesses become presidents of societies and do not disdain a little electioneering for the majority.

What may not be expected, now that the growth of the American idea has made Spain a republic?

It is seen, however, by many persons with artistic tastes and sympathies that the utilitarian and leveling process is fast uprooting ancient landmarks, and with them much that possesses the strongest claims upon our hereditary affections. Street cars are convenient and level roads easy to walk upon, but they are monotonous and not picturesque.

Just so the thrift that turns ancient churches into marts for merchandise, water falls into mill power, and makes coats and chairs alike by steam, of the same style and with the self-same smirk and grimace, may be commendable, but it is at the same time tiresom and characteriess to the last degree. Artists therefore and people who can afford to affect art are rushing in to secure whatever railroads and telegraphs and iron-cent scrapers and P.&T. Barnum have left of the ancient, the odd, and the ideal. The gilt and satin-packed upholsterage is no longer fashionable—high art is fashionable and high art is simplicity in the shape of raw Aldine and old carvings, and straight backed chairs, and Dresden shepherdesses.

The modern art of war has taught us how to kill by wholesale, without the use of swords or other hand instruments, which will soon become rare; old weapons are therefore in demand for walls, interspersed with stag's heads and other evidences of the love of our ancestry for deeds of valor. The fortunate possessor of revolutionary relics should guard them safely, for though they have not yet the interest which attaches to such European belongings, yet they may have in time; and the three-cornered hat and knee-breeches be put in a frame and suspended from the panelled wall as the choicest of its adornments.

SPRING FASHIONS AND FASHIONINGS.

An English writer remarks that the word fashion is fast resolving itself back to its original meaning of "to make," or "the making of anything," for certainly it no longer means "what is customary." "Costume" and "habit" have both been deprived of their original meaning, which was "uniform" or "habitual dress;" costume especially being now understood to mean a dress composed of two colors, materials, or parts, as distinct from "suits," which now means uniform or complete dress. As a compensation for the severe winter we have had, March is expected to be more than usually amiable, and therefore the dry goods stores already exhibit a large and varied supply of spring materials.

Foremost among them are the new satin-striped and brocke Japanese silks and poplins, which in finish and beauty of appearance are far in advance of any which have heretofore appeared in the market. The gloss on these fabrics is superior to that on pure silks, and is obtained from the mixture of fine, highly glazed cotton, which bears a higher finish than all silk. It is not a useful or durable material to purchase, but being less costly than rich silk, and better-looking than a poor one, is useful for ladies who with limited means want a nice silky-looking dress for the house, or for best, which will not be commonly worn, or exposed to dust or dampness. Under these conditions Japanese silks will do very good service.

The colors are exactly the same as last year—olive browns, light tan and leather browns, sage greens, reseda, and the like. In foulardes and cambries there is a revival of the old polka spot, white or dark blue, and brown grounds. Dark blue particularly threatens us, as it had a success abroad last year, and whatever is seen abroad must be taken with thankfulness a season after by the stay-at-homes. The polka dot is also seen in white upon black in foulardes, muslin and cambric not necessarily for mourning, but mainly for overdresses, such as the tunic or blouse polonaise. Sometimes the entire costume is composed of the dotted material, the skirt being ornamented with gathered or pleated flounces, the polonaise plain, with the exception of very large buckles or buttons, placed upon the sides, and all the way down the front. They impart an appearance of distinction. Black straw hats, trimmed with black grosgrain ribbon and blue corn flowers, and black belt, with pocket, or gros-grain sash, are worn with these dresses.

The new white pique is embroidered by hand in white dots, sprigs, buds and leaves. This is trimmed with needlework in bands and insertions, and makes very expensive suits and dresses, which, however, on this account cannot become common. Batiste is, of course, in high feather—plain, embroidered and embroidered in lace—like patterns, precisely like balzorine of years and years ago. Balzorine is appears in fact as formerly, in cotton and woolen materials, principally as a stripe, which alternates and sometimes contrasts in color with a stripe of the solid material. The Alzerian stripe and various other names are given to it. Broche linen is a name given to heavy Batiste upon which oak, palm, fern leaves or polka dots are embroidered by machinery much less expensively than when done by hand.

The spring costumes are lovely in color and quality, the fine clear grays and blues being prominent and most fashionably worn. It is only recently that American ladies began to see beauty in this soft exquisite fabric; now there are many who are inclined to wear nothing else. Black cashimere costumes, literally covered with embroideries are a feature of the spring importations. The most distinguished are all black and are additionally trimmed with wide guipure lace. In Paris a very handsome embroidered costume or polonaise can be purchased for forty dollars; here it costs one hundred and forty.

Speaking of prices, no lady returns from Europe without an evening dress and day polonaise of real genoa velvet. Such a dress trimmed with point lace is always fashionable, while the cost of material is little more than one forth the price at home.

Of silks and poplins there is not much to be said. Poplins have not yet recovered the prestige they have lost within the last few years, and of silks it may truly be repeated that the good are not new and the new are not good. Standard silks, black and choice colors, are constantly improving, or rather irrepecting, but the modern silk shams are not half as respectable as a good cotton. Striped summer silks are numerous and consist of hair-stripes, single or in clusters, in two contrasting or several different colors. They are pretty in appearance, but require to be made up elaborately and fully trimmed or the result will be flat and ineffective.

BLACK GRENADINE.

There has been a sort of mania for black grenadine suits for some time past, just as there was, as is for black silk suits, and for the same reason, because they are always ready, always appropriate, and always lady-like. The necessity for making them over black silk, however, thus rendering them expensive and too warm for summer, has been a considerable drawback to their popularity, and any method which tends toward the reduction of cost or weight of completed costume would be met with favor. Among the means resorted to now that pleated flounces and side pleats are so much in vogue is to mount these on a black turquoire or foularde silk lining, thus saving both the warmth and expense of the foundation material of the skirt. Most ladies however prefer to have a single skirt simply trimmed; high plain waist and long sleeves of black foularde, made simply as a slip, and over which plain black, striped black and white, or figured black grenadine suits can be indiscriminately worn, and as most summer wardrobes contain one at least of each of these styles, the under dress is in no danger of not being sufficiently utilized.

Striped black grenadines will be more fashionable than ever this season, and a variation is made by striping plain grenadine with rich lace passamenterie slightly picked out with extremely brilliant jet. This is very effective for lace jackets and polanaises worn over high white or colored silk dresses for dinner or half evening toilets.

WAIST COATS AND FICHUS.

High or low plain straight bodies are no longer seen. Basques, or jackets with waist-coats, (real or simulated,) are universal and are made for the bridal dress of white satin as well as for the street dress of black alpaca.

The pretty sleeveless jackets, invaluable for covering up a plain old fashioned waist and making presentable or otherwise hopeless toilette are called waist coats and thus mislead persons who are accustomed to consider a waistcoat as the under part of a coat or jacket.

Very simple morning dresses of print, gingham, or cambric are cut in the Gabrielle style, or with a yoke, or with pleated shirt waist, or shirt, and plain blouse polonaise—the latter belnd cut at the waist; but dresses of any pretentious whatever—whether silk, or woolen, or cotton—are made with high or low jacket waists unless the skirt is accompanied by a polonaise.

In vests and fichus there are many new and pretty ideas. Mixtures of crepe and lace, or velvet and lace, the boddice cut square in front and surrounded by a fraise of lace, upright at the back, with a rose upon the left side. Crepe, it may be remarked, is very becoming used for vest or neck-tie.

Collars are now hardly ever seen except upon elderly ladies. Young girls wear ruches of crepe, lisse or tulle, and young slender matrons a Francis II frilse for the throat and ruffle for the wrist, of fine organdy or crepe lisse.

Plain high dresses of black, pearl color, or cream tinted silk, not unfrequently display a chemisette of tulle laid in straight folds upon the boddice, crossed at the waist and cut into wide scarf ends which outline a small panier and form a sash bow with ends low upon the left side of the skirt. A tulle ruche at the neck and tulle pleatings at the wrist complete the garniture.

The ornaments of the dress worn by a young lady should consist of a black onyx locket, set with diamonds, and small diamond solitaire earrings. No bracelets and few rings.

Very pretty collarettes, or French capes for silk dresses, open in front, but not cut out, are composed of folds of crepe, lissen or crepe decturne, bordered with wide pacoline laces and finished with slendered bows of ribbon, the capes not unfrequently turned into a drapery for the skirt and constitutes its only adornment.

High pelerines are also made of silk, and silk and lace, and silk and crepe, with tulle ruching for covering low necks, and perfectly simulate a high boddice, if made of a color to match the dress.

COIFFURES.

The revolution in regard to the hair is complete. Chignons, waterfalls and chatelaine braids have disappeared. The hair is now combed straight up from the back of the neck twisted or folded in a smooth band on the top of the head and surrounded by a braid which forms a coronet over the forehead.

The small scarf mantelet, single and double, will be revived for out-door wear, as warm wether approaches, but will hardly compete or popularity with the favorite lace jackets and polonaise.

More about the Fraud on the Bank of England.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—It is proper to say that the sacred phrase thoughtlessly placed, by the artist in charge of the decorations, among the legends of the inaugural ball, was removed by the commitee of arrangements.

Most of the new Senators were seated yesterday. Senator Spencer, of Alabama, was called but did not put in an appearance. It is understood that objections would have been made. Neither Gen. McMillan nor Pinchback were called.

NEW JERSEY.

TRENTON, March 3.—The National Railroad bill has been passed by the House. The Senate vote stood 10 to 11. There was indignant demonstrations made in the galleries when the vote was announced.

NEW YORK.

FIRE.

NEW YORK, March 5.—The Chemical works of Jacob Elfas has been burned; loss $10,000.

The weather is clear and cold. The gale has somewhat subsided.

Foster received his reprieve last night with great rejoicing.

Jay Cooke & Co, have no advices indicating the loss of a quarter of a million in the Bank of England swindle. They are in receipt of their usual cables, but no mention is made of it.

Foster's friends think that his sequence will be commuted to imprisonment for life.

A woman died yesterday with symptoms of yellow fever.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6.—The wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company on the P., W. and B. R. were cut last night maliciously, and the working of the trains was seriously impacted thereby. Damage was done in Maryland.

ENGLAND.

LONDON, March 5.—The circumstances of the fraud on the Bank of England remain a mystery. Noyes, a clerk as confederate of the forgers, now under arrest, is a native of the United States. He protests his innocence, but doubtless knows more than he is willing to tell.

Astonishment is expressed that the extent of the transactions did not arouse the suspicion of banking officials, but it seems operators represented that they were interested in the introduction of American cars on the British railways and were arranging for their manufacture on a scale which required the employment of a large amount of funds.

The Times has a special dispatch from Berlin stating that the ability of France to give financial guarantee sufficient to secure the early evacuation of French territory by the German troops is doubtful in that city.

The son of the late Emperor Napoleon paid a visit to Queen Victoria yesterday.

A movement is on foot among the Irish population for a great meeting in Hyde Park in favor of amnesty for the Fenians now held in prison by British Government. The meeting over which Dr. Isaac Ball, member of Parliament for Limerick, will preside, will probably be held on the sixteenth of this month.

☞The annexation of west Florida to Alabama, and the annexation of Mobile to Mississippi are questions now agitating the people of three States. Mobile is mad because she can't be "best" of the whole State, and she, therefore, wants to get into a State where she can be boss. Pensacola has the best harbor in the world, and the people of Alabama want that harbor. So, on the whole, we rather incline to the opinion that if we have to lose one or the other cities, we had better say to Mobile go, and to Pensacola, come. The subject is open for debate.—Alabama State Journal.

☞Mrs. Jones has long been wanting to visit Greenwood Cemetery. Said it early enough to-day to suit her husband. "You have never yet taken me to Greenwood." "No dear," he replied, "that's a pleasure I have yet only an anticipation."

Figures.

There are 22,000,000 cattle in the United States.

England imported last year poultry and game to the value of a million.

It is estimated that 7,000,000 hogs will be packed this year in the United States.

The balance of trade against the United States last year, was, in round numbers $118,000,000.

The horses in the United States are valued at six hundred and sixty millions of dollars.

It is estimated that a total of 7,000,000 bales of cotton, valued at $400,000,000 in gold, is now consumed every year in Europe and the United States.

News Condensed.

The population of Egypt is 5,000,000 besides the alligators of the Nile.

Only 15 per cent of the land of Cuba is under the plow, yet her annual exports reach $90,000,000.

Fully 25,000 strangers partook of the Mardi Gras festivities at Memphis.

Manville, R. I., has nearly completed the largest cotton manufacturing establishment under one roof in the world. It is 763 feet long, 82 feet wide, and four stories in height, will contain over 2,000 looms, and run 126,000 spindles, employing 3,000 hands.

Editorial Mirch.

The constitutional convention of Pennsylvania, in Philadelphia last week, adopted the proposition to have the names of all the voters written on the ballots voted.

The railways of the United States require 2,500,000 tons of iron annually.

The United States own in real property over $20,000,000 worth, and in public buildings about $50,000,000. The grounds dedicated to public use, in parks, squares, etc., are valued at about $19,000,000.

Tennessee News.

The Clerk of Henderson county issued last year, two hundred and fifty marriage licenses.

Maury county had three hundred and eighty seven marriages in 1872.

UNDER and by virtue of a writ of fieri facias, issued out of the Honorable, the Circuit Court of the United States, for the Northern District of Georgia, in favor of the plaintiffs, Frank W. Hall, in the following case, to-wit:

Frank W. Hall versus The Yahoola River and Cane Creek Hydraulic Hoar Mining Company.

I have levied upon, as the property of The Yahoola River and Cane Creek Hydraulic Hoss Mining Company, the following described property:

Lands in the twelfth district of the first section of originally Cherokee, now Lumpkin county, as follows:

Lots numbers 1,052, 1,128, 1,151 and 1,052, each containing forty acres; lot number 960 (except the mines and minerals) also containing forty acres. The north half (except the dwellings and 4 45-100 acres) of lot number 926. The mineral interest of all mines and minerals, with the privilege of working the same in lots numbers 661, 668, 789 and 825, and all of lots number 747 and 791, that lie north of a line drawn twenty feet north of the north bank of Cane Creek, following the meanders as it runs through said lots.

Lands in the eleventh district, same section and county, as follows:

Lot number 1,126 (except the mineral interest.) The west half of lot number 1,107. Two acres of lot number 1,107, including the mill shoal and mill yard and location and all pine timber (with the right of cutting and removing it) on lots numbers 908, 966 and 969.

Leasehold estates, all in the twelfth district, same section and county, as follows:

Leasehold in ten acres of lot number 926, comprehending the privilege of working the gold mines and deposits of metal situated [illegible] leasehold in lot number 1,076, comprehending the right to work it for gold and all other minerals [illegible] leasehold in lots numbers 1,004, 1,005, 1,006, 1,007, 1,008, 1,009 and 1,010, comprehending the right of mining for gold and other minerals [illegible] leasehold in lots numbers 778, 784, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799 and 800, comprehending the right of working the ferruginous gravel deposits [illegible] leasehold in lot number 1,006, and an undivided half of all that part of lot number 1,034, which lies north of the old tan-yard road, running through said lot to or the branch, comprehending the right to work said land for gold and other minerals; leasehold in lots numbers 1,006, 1,007 and 1,072, comprehending the right to work them for gold and other minerals [illegible] leasehold in lot number 1,022, comprehending the right to work it for gold and other valuable minerals till exhausted, with the right to cut and remove timber for mining purposes; leasehold in northeast corner, containing twelve acres, more or less, of lot number 921, comprehending the right of mining for gold and other minerals [illegible] lots numbers 1,004, 1,005, 1,006, 1,007, 1,008, 1,009 and 1,010, comprehending the right of working the ferruginous gravel deposits [illegible] leasehold in lots numbers 778, 784, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799 and 800, comprehending the right of working the ferruginous gravel deposits

Judge Irwin on the Bond Question.

Judge David Irwin has written a short letter on the bond question, which will command attention. The reputation of the author is extensive as the limits of the State, and the conservative course he suggests, will, we do not doubt, accord with the sentiments of honest men of the State. The letter is addressed to THE CONSTITUTION, brief, yet clear. We annex it almost entire, in his own language.—Monroe Advertiser.

Judge Lochrane on the Bonds.

We give an article from Judge Lochrane, at his own request, presenting the claims of the foreign holders of the first Brunswick and Albany Railroad bonds. Judge Lochrane is the attorney representing over two millions of these bonds. While this does not lessen the weight of his facts and arguments, yet it places his article on somewhat different grounds from those of disinterested citizens.

Such a Happy Rehabilitation!

In the telegraphic report of President Grant's inaugural address we find the cool statement that "the States lately at war with the general government are now happily rehabilitated, and no executive control is exercised in any one of them that would not be exercised in any other State under like circumstances." This statement is as true as Wilson's denial of affiliation with Knownothigism, or of connection with Hoax Ames' corporation. If a circuit Judge of New York or Massachusetts should issue orders similar to Durell's, the President knows that he would not support such diabolical villainy in the sense that he is now intervening in the affairs of Louisiana. But the statement is as near the truth as the leaders of the Mobilier party seem to be capable of; and with that, perhaps we ought to be satisfied.

Let us look at the happy rehabilitation of Louisiana. The de facto combination of thieves and fools, and the de jure Legislature, complete their labors to-day. Both have enacted a large body of general and special "laws;" and now the question is, which shall be obeyed? In the words of the New Orleans Times, Will either? or will neither? One thing is certain—no taxes will be paid to the Kellogg usurpation. Its supporters are niggers, scalawags, and carpet-baggers, and none of these are in the habit of paying taxes to anybody. Not a dollar will come to their itching palms; Federal bayonets are powerless in this respect. The taxable property of the State will be protected from the plunderers by a league that is invincible. Neither will the people pay taxes to the McEnry government in the chaos that the President's wicked intervention has brought upon the State. If this is a happy rehibilitation, we beg to be excused from experiencing the process in Georgia.

Both sides are arming. The People's Legislature authorized the Governor to use the civil, and if necessary, the military power of the State, to reinstate the Judges of the District Courts of the parish of Orleans, on their, respective benches, and to sustain them in the exercise of their judicial powers. The Governor commands all citizens to report forthwith "for assignment to the several militia commands now in process of organization." Major General Eugene Waggaman is in command, and the militia are being rapidly organized. On the other side, Generals Longstreet and Baxter are drilling the colored troops, whom tradition says fought nobly. It begins to look as if Louisiana will soon be more happily rehabilitated than she was when the inaugural proclaimed the blessed fact.

Who is to blame? The President, and no one else. Under the cover of Durell's infamous orders that no Radical lawyer was base enough to defend in Congress, he attempted to dictate the form of government that he wished the people of Louisiana to have. This was the Pandora box from which the subsequent vile frauds and usurpations sprung. He petitioned Congress to relieve him from the wretched dilemma; and when Congress would not, then, as an obstinate man, he determined to fight it out on the Durell line, regardless of consequences.

Every chance for as good a rehabilitation as the unwise acts of the President would permit, in the Carpenter bill. After taking 1,100 pages of testimony, a majority of the Senatorial Radical Committee reported that the Kellogg government rests upon unmitigated acts of usurpation, and that the McEnery government is the de jure government; but on account of alleged frauds in the election, the committee reported a bill providing for a new election. In Senator Carpenter's able effort to properly characterize the government set up solely by Federal power, he used these practical words: "I would like to see anybody stump through Wisconsin in the next canvass if we stand by this Kellogg government." And then comes in the striking paradox of a Senator, who had thus confessed to a knowledge of the outrageous circumstances, deliberately voting for the retention of the Kellogg crew until a new election could be held!

The best thing in the unhappy business is the refusal of Congress to help the President out. The responsibility is now on the great rehabilitator, and he does not seem to like it—at least he does not mention it in the self-gratulations of the Inaugural. Such violent and outrageous acts of executive and judicial tyranny caused Iowa, and Ohio, and even the mobilierized Bay State quite as much as they do Louisiana. In the shifting current of circumstances it may be their turn next, and the acts of to-day will, if sustained, be the nails to their coffins. Political liberty can not go down in one State without being endangered in all.

These are not wanting signs to indicate that Senator Carpenter read aright the handwriting on the wall. With the proven facts and the condition of the "happy rehabilitated" state of Louisiana before their eyes, the administration orators of the next canvass will not have an enviable task.

GEORGIA BONDS.

Judge Lochrane Asks a Hearing in Behalf of the Foreign Holders of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Bonds on Finished Road.

Editors Constitution: No man doubts the importance of settling the "bond question," so far as the interests of the citizens of this State are concerned. And no man who has watched the events of the last few months doubts that this subject must undergo a thorough and impartial investigation. The investigation by the Bond Committee was one-sided, and the facts which could and would have been brought to light if the holders of the bonds had been admitted with their counsel to prove their side of the case, must in some form, and before some tribunal, be heard, whether it be before the Legislature or before a committee, or the courts, and, as a last resort, before the commercial world. It is useless to expect acquiescence in the report of a committee divesting the rights of parties to millions of money, without a hearing; American love of justice and fair play recoils from the manifest injustice of such a proceeding. That it is indefensible no people will more readily admit on second thought, than the citizens of this State. At any rate until there is a hearing of the Bond holders' side of the question, the agitation of the subject can never be stopped. To this proposition we may make up our minds. To wrap ourselves up in the delusion of the matter being settled by "the Bond Committee," is vain. The question will not "down at the bidding" of any body, power or opinion, until it has been fairly heard and the question decided, not upon clamor, but upon facts.

With the view to correct very grave, and I might say strange misunderstandings upon the subject, as evidenced by the letters of various distinguished and highly honorable gentlemen, permit me to present some facts connected with the bonds indorsed for the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company which have been overlooked if they have ever been known. And in this connection and for such bondholders I utterly and emphatically deny that they admit their bonds to be illegal, or that they sue for mercy, on the contrary they allege now and all the time that every bond they hold is a legal, valid, binding obligation on the State of Georgia, whether measured by the facts or by the law, or by the decision of all American courts, or by the constitution of the State. The foreign bondholder is no beggar at the gates of the Capitol. He stands upright and asks nothing on God's earth but justice and his legal rights.

The proposition made by the Senator from the 10th district, Mr. Styles, to open the courts to test by the law his legal rights, is all he asked when repudiation passed, and all he asks now. Let him try his case before impartial men learned in the law, is a simple request, and shows who has confidence in their position. The bondholders who desire to test the question, or the State that refuses. It can't be, as some argue, that this would be derogatory to the State's dignity. For Georgia has submitted to suit before (18 Geo. 65 77.) In the very proudest days of her history she provided for suits against herself in small-pox cases. It would not be any deterioration of her reputation to submit to the laws of the land where large interests, involving her interests and her honor, are involved.

The United States may be sued in the Court of Claims; and why should Georgia not submit to the law the question of her liability? Does it not look, by refusing, as if she had but little confidence in the legality of the decision she has rendered herself in favor of herself?

It exhibits one fact boldly and prominently, that the bondholders have more confidence in the justice of their claim than a State has in the justice of her decision.

As we are deprived the use of the courts, we must try to present the case before the people, whose love of justice will at last force the doors of the Court to open, that men may not be deprived of their property, without some appeal to the laws of the land, talk of the dignity of the State refusing a hearing when the Almighty did not even sentence Adam in the garden without hearing his defence.

That the bonds of the Brunswick & Alabama Railroad were endorsed by the State of Georgia. Under an act of the Legislature, approved March 18, 1869, no man who can read can deny, that one million and a half of them were signed by Dr. Angier, State Treasurer, will not, for it can not be disputed, that the balance up to three millions three hundred thousand were indorsed by the Governor of Georgia, is equally indisputable; that the act was a solemn contract founded upon good and valuable consideration, was held by the three departments of the government—the Executive, Legislative and Judicial. We will now proceed to demonstrate. When the State of Georgia was in convention at the commencement of the war, the Northern owners of this road, who had 55 miles in good running order and built with their own money, sent an agent to the State to represent the property. He was in communication with the late Judge Nesbit who assured him that the road belonging to aliens should be protected, and that Convention passed an ordinance guaranteeing the protection of the State. After the war, when the owners came to Georgia, instead of finding their road protected, it was dismantled, its iron scattered, and seventy-five ions of it lying on the road belonging to the State. This is the protection it received, they came before the Legislature asking to be paid, and, standing on the State's guarantee, for this guarantee was not made by men whose character or reputation admitted any pretext to get out of the liability, the question was submitted to the Legislature, and by a majority it was held "the State made itself a trustee in law for the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company, and responsible for the safe keeping of the road and, therefore liable for all damages arising from its destruction." Without agreeing as to the amount, as the best solution of the difficulty, the bill to indorse $15,000 per mile was proposed on condition the owners of the road would release the State from the claim and the iron then lying on the State Road. This was accepted and assented to, and the bill passed the House by almost an unanimous vote when there was some thirty Democratic majority, so overwhelming that there was no call for the yeas and nays. When it reached the Senate the constitutionality of the act was attacked and the question raised, that there was not an amount equal to the endorsement invested by private person. A Committee (of as good men as ever sat in a Georgia Legislature decided this question. We quote from the report "that the amount of investment made by Stock Holders and destroyed by the action of the State, is larger than the amount of the endorsement" so that the very question raised now, to divest vested rights by Legislative act, was solemnly raised and adjudicated and never can be annulled by any power, until all rights growing up under it, are constitutionally determined by the judiciary. The last Legislature had no more jurisdictional authority over the subject, than the French Council of five hundred. They were wisely afraid of Courts to test the question.

But after the Legislature of 1868 brought into power by the same agencies that the convention of 1868 was created by (who by the way were the authors of this constitutional limitation so sacredly regarded when the purpose suites) had passed the law and sanctioned this legislative contract, a resolution was passed in the House requiring the Governor to suspend his action until another Committee had investigated charges which ended in smoke, and finally the Governor was besieged with the same hostilities to this bill, the Central Railroad and the Atlantic and Gulf leading the fight with the ablest men, and the Executive sanctioned the bill. Thus matters proceeded until under the law it became necessary to ask for the signature of the Treasurer, and then another fight with the ablest men on both sides, General Jackson, of Savannah, on one side, and Mr. Dougherty and Judge Solomon for the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company. Out of this ordeal of fire the contract survived, sanctioned by the Legislative, Executive and Judicial departments, and thus the road went on until the 100 mile post was reached and the $1,500,000 bonds duly executed, indorsed and signed by Mr. Angier as Treasurer and sealed with the pass and honor of the State. Then came an amended act, changing the mode of indorsement, but containing this pregnant passage: "that all the bonds of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company, hereafter guaranteed by the State of Georgia by the indorsement of the Treasurer thereon under the act hereby amended, are hereby declared to be duly and legally guaranteed and the State bound and pledged upon said guarantee."

After the law was amended the Governor of this State indorsed by virtue of the act, and there we reach the period when the question so settled by the act itself, and by the court was raised again under the hue and cry of "Fraud, illegality, unconstitutionality, etc., etc." At this point it becomes necessary for me to allude to another law passed in 1870, by which the State took the second mortgage bonds of the road at $10,000 per mile, and consented to waive the forfeiture therein for at $6,000, with these bonds I have no advocacy and no connection. I will present views as to them when I come to the "compromise." But let it be understood as the facts are, that these bonds have nothing to do with the indorsed bonds of which I am now writing; the bonds are different, and the one has nothing to do with the other in any legal view of the case.

I now come to the question which hereafter I will show cannot affect the bond holder, but in vindication of truth, I meet it and assert that the act of 1869 was a legislative contract founded upon consideration and sustained by the laws of the land.

In the first place by consideration is meant a benefit or gain to the party making the promise, or a loss or injury to the party to whom it is made. Here the benefit was the release of the State from the claim of 75 tons of iron belonging to this company lying then and now on the State Road; also the release of the claim for the damages accruing by the failure, after assuming to protect the property and the deed of trust made to the State specially for her protection on the promise to guarantee $15,000 per mile. There were other considerations to the State. The building of this road enhanced her taxable property, as reported by Colonel Frobel, the Superintendent of Public Works, $2,636,614; and, again, there was expended on the soil of Georgia on this road $3,218,000—a sum larger than the bonds indorsed or $3,300,000, at 90 cents on the dollar, amounted to ——.

Now, being a legislative contract founded on good consideration, so far as the road was finished, or 173 miles, are not the bonds on the 173 miles of finished road legal, valid and binding obligations on the State.

But it is said a portion of the bonds were issued before the road was completed in sections, and were for more than the half cost of the road. As to the first, while we again assert, even if true, it does not affect the bondholder on the finished road, yet we will meet this objection and show, that there is nothing in it. The road when finished makes the road good or the same entitle the party to a new indorsement, for the law is not on covenant or condition as to the time of indorsement. This was left with the Governor and his engineer, and when indorsed, the fact carried with it the evidence of compliance. No man contends that the purchaser of a bond must examine the road, for this would be unreasonable and in conflict with the requirements of the law. The settled rule as to bonds, is, that being under seal, made payable to bearer and intended for public sale, they are under the same protection in the hands of a holder as a greenback or currency—White va. Vt. and Mass. R. R. 21 How. 575; Comrs va. Apinwall 1d 645, also see 23 How. 331. 1 Black 286, 2 Black 722, 1 Wall 95, id 175 id 257, id 291 id 391 2 id 110. 3d 327 id 654, 7id 407 5 id 199. 1 Bess 329, 1 Stockt 689, 3 Kern 592, 25 No. 9 496 8 Paige 527, 2 Hill 1c9, 41 Barb 9, 3 Duer 660, 15 Conn 502 81 id 342. 20 Ind 469, 18 Ind 96 13 id 161, 2 Metc 79, 8 Gray 574, 31 Miss 216, 18 Iowa 213, 16 Ohio at 145, etc. etc.

This doctrine is sustained by the leading Publicists. Edwards on b ls and notes 308-310. Parsons on contracts, 242, etc. Parsons on bills and notes, 113, etc. Redfield on Railways, 595, etc., and by a host of decisions all concurring. That when bonds importing on their face compliance with the law, under the authority by which they were issued and passing into the hands of bona fide holders, it is too late to call in question the the defense of irregularity in the exercise of the authority, etc.

Now to avoid this overwhelming weight of authority, the point has been raised, that the Governor of Georgia is an agent, and all who deal with him deal with notice of the limitation upon his power, etc. We admit the proposition for the sake of the argument that the Governor is a public agent representing the Government, and differs from the agent of a private corporation, in that his power to bind rests upon the extent only of powers actually conferred upon him.

His fundamental duties are defined in the organic law, and of his power parties dealing with him as Governor are presumed to be informed. But this presumption must be taken with another presumption of law that all public officers and especially high functionaries perform their official duties, 14 Peters 448, Story, Judge.

We appreciate the distinction of law writers on this subject and apprehend the palpable mistake exists in treating the Governor with regard to his duties under the execution of his office, and treating him as discharging a specific duty imposed by an act of the Legislature.

The law in the first case imposes a presumption on the party who deals with him. In the other the law confers the power, and the party need only look to the law

But by carefully analyzing the authorities on the first general proposition, we find as laid down in 7th Wall, that there are officers such as the President, the Legislature and the Judiciary who may exercise powers not necessarily incidental to the fundamental law, but officers appointed by these are limited and their powers must be defined." The Governor of Georgia stands in this case clothed with the power of the Legislature, and we need not discuss, how far the State would be bound on a contract made by the Governor as Governors for the benefit of the State. But we have only to deal with a very plain and practical proposition to test his power or the powers of the Treasurer of the State to do an act, directed by a Legislative act.

And in this light we say this act was Executive, and the seal of the State is not the symbol of an Agent but the majestic attestation of the sovereign power—and when the Governor, under authority of an act of the Legislature, affixes his signature, he is no more the agent in approving the law than he is in executing it. Could his power be delegated, could it be taken away? The Constitution assigns his duty and the prerogatives of his power are not left with the construction of the Legislature. He moves in his sphere as independent as either the Legislature or the Judiciary.

As to the second proposition that the bonds were indorsed for more than half invested by private persons. We propose only to lay down a few legal propositions that any tree lawyer will see and appreciate the force of. It is not denied that the Constitution is silent as to how the estimate is to be made. If the Legislature could appoint commissioners to assess the cost, the Legislature could make the estimate and the estimate when made must be final, whether made by the com'n or by the Legislature. In this case the Legislature did make the estimate, first by indorsing a fixed amount; second, by declaring in the bill that this road would cost at least $30,000 per mile. Now, having made the estimate and the indorsement, did the purchaser get a vested right? If he did, can a mistake, either by the commissioners or by the Legislature, render it invalid? This question is too simple to be gravely submitted, and it but resolves itself, like the most technicalities pleaded, into evanescent diminution.

The holder of a bond indorsed under the act of the Legislature, is in no way bound by the errors of officials, and while there is not a technicality that could be pleaded that would rise to the dignity of a defence, still each one can be fairly met and answered by the facts of this case. And the estimate of the Legislature that the road would cost $30,000 per mile, and fixing the sum to be indorsed at $15,000 per mile, was a decision within the constitutional competency of the Legislature to make, and when made, and the bond was executed and passed for valuable consideration into the hands of a bona fide holder, there is not a court in Christendom but would render the law to enforce the payment to the holder.

A good many of the presses have articles upon the amount of money "half a million," which has been or will be spent to induce the Legislature to pay what the call "bogus or fraudulent bonds." Will the same presses advocate the opening of the courts to test the question whether these bonds are "bogus or fraudulent". This will prevent any influence being used but the law and the facts, and why not let the question be settled by law as to the truth of lids as oft repeated and so unfounded assertion. If the bonds are bogus and fraudulent, I oppose their payment out and out. The State is not bound to pay on "forged or fraudulent bonds," neither should "thieves" be paid—never, with my consent or on any compromise. But to cry "thief and fraud," while we hold over three millions of money in the State advanced upon bonds issued under authority of the Legislature and indorsed by the State Treasurer, and sealed with the seal of the State, and the bonds of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company, hereafter guaranteed by the State of Georgia by the indorsement of the Treasurer thereon under the act hereby the payment. I might refer to almost all the leading railroad men and commercial men of the State, in favor of it, because the credit has been injured. Why injured, because the leading lawyers of this and other lands, the leading bankers here and abroad, believe that the charge of bad faith made as to the bond holders, legitimately belongs elsewhere. How can there be bad faith in purchasing bonds at full value—do men cheat themselves? How could there be bad faith in buying bonds that the late distinguished Mr. Dougherty, one of the purest and ablest lawyers of this State, upon cash sold, he sold the Treasurer of the State it was his duty to indorse. He knew the whole question, had argued it at Brunswick, knew every charge made, and yet he advised the Treasurer it was duty to indorse the guaranty of the State thereon. Certainly it was not his duty if the act was a fraud and a cheat on the State, and the bonds were "bogus and fraudulent," and a cheat on the commercial world. I may be pardoned for believing the opinion of Mr. Dougherty who knew all the facts on both sides of this question, to the opinion of gentlemen, no matter how distinguished, whose letters exhibit a want of information as to the material facts, and start out with the idea that these bonds are illegal—the very question at issue.

Suppose bankers or citizens of Georgia had bought the indorsed bonds on the Brunswick and Albany Railroad, and the bonds were upon the 173 miles of finished road, and had paid out 90 cents on the dollar for them, would they be satisfied with the charge of "bogus bonds," upon the part of the State, or would they demand the legal right to have that question tested.

All this applies to the bonds of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad indorsed and upon finished road from Brunswick and Albany, but it is argued that the bonds for this road from Albany to Cuthbert were indorsed upon unfinished road, and that these were illegal. The proposition made was to complete the road and cure this by doing so. The State would have had a road built 243 miles upon her territory, developed a timber trade equal to the cotton productions of that section—made good the investments along the line of the road amounting to thousands of dollars by her own citizens, kept faith with those who have spent some two millions of dollars in Brunswick with those who have made their homes there, buried their loved ones their, and cannot now leave without ruin of fortune. In addition to this the completion of the road secured the State from the contingent liability, for all that was required was to carry out the contract entered into in the act of March 18, 1869, and this proposition in its good faith and honesty met with the approval of the very best men in Georgia—men as sensitive about paying "forged or fraudulent" bonds as me most bitter opponents. But suppose it is true that Gov. Bullock had no discretion under the act of September to endorse these bonds on the road, for this would be unreasonable and in conflict with the requirements of the law. The settled rule as to bonds, is, that being under seal, made payable to bearer and intended for public sale, they are under the same protection in the hands of a holder as a greenback or currency—White va. Vt. and Mass. R. R. 21 How. 575; Comrs va. Apinwall 1d 645, also see 23 How. 331. 1 Black 286, 2 Black 722, 1 Wall 95, id 175 id 257, id 291 id 391 2 id 110. 3d 327 id 654, 7id 407 5 id 199. 1 Bess 329, 1 Stockt 689, 3 Kern 592, 25 No. 9 496 8 Paige 527, 2 Hill 1c9, 41 Barb 9, 3 Duer 660, 15 Conn 502 81 id 342. 20 Ind 469, 18 Ind 96 13 id 161, 2 Metc 79, 8 Gray 574, 31 Miss 216, 18 Iowa 213, 16 Ohio at 145, etc. etc.

This doctrine is sustained by the leading Publicists. Edwards on b ls and notes 308-310. Parsons on contracts, 242, etc. Parsons on bills and notes, 113, etc. Redfield on Railways, 595, etc., and by a host of decisions all concurring. That when bonds importing on their face compliance with the law, under the authority by which they were issued and passing into the hands of bona fide holders, it is too late to call in question the the defense of irregularity in the exercise of the authority, etc.

Now to avoid this overwhelming weight of authority, the point has been raised, that the Governor of Georgia is an agent, and all who deal with him deal with notice of the limitation upon his power, etc. We admit the proposition for the sake of the argument that the Governor is a public agent representing the Government, and differs from the agent of a private corporation, in that his power to bind rests upon the extent only of powers actually conferred upon him.

His fundamental duties are defined in the organic law, and of his power parties dealing with him as Governor are presumed to be informed. But this presumption must be taken with another presumption of law that all public officers and especially high functionaries perform their official duties, 14 Peters 448, Story, Judge.

We appreciate the distinction of law writers on this subject and apprehend the palpable mistake exists in treating the Governor with regard to his duties under the execution of his office, and treating him as discharging a specific duty imposed by an act of the Legislature.

The law in the first case imposes a presumption on the party who deals with him. In the other the law confers the power, and the party need only look to the law

But by carefully analyzing the authorities on the first general proposition, we find as laid down in 7th Wall, that there are officers such as the President, the Legislature and the Judiciary who may exercise powers not necessarily incidental to the fundamental law, but officers appointed by these are limited and their powers must be defined." The Governor of Georgia stands in this case clothed with the power of the Legislature, and we need not discuss, how far the State would be bound on a contract made by the Governor as Governors for the benefit of the State. But we have only to deal with a very plain and practical proposition to test his power or the powers of the Treasurer of the State to do an act, directed by a Legislative act.

And in this light we say this act was Executive, and the seal of the State is not the symbol of an Agent but the majestic attestation of the sovereign power—and when the Governor, under authority of an act of the Legislature, affixes his signature, he is no more the agent in approving the law than he is in executing it. Could his power be delegated, could it be taken away? The Constitution assigns his duty and the prerogatives of his power are not left with the construction of the Legislature. He moves in his sphere as independent as either the Legislature or the Judiciary.

As to the second proposition that the bonds were indorsed for more than half invested by private persons. We propose only to lay down a few legal propositions that any tree lawyer will see and appreciate the force of. It is not denied that the Constitution is silent as to how the estimate is to be made. If the Legislature could appoint commissioners to assess the cost, the Legislature could make the estimate and the estimate when made must be final, whether made by the com'n or by the Legislature. In this case the Legislature did make the estimate, first by indorsing a fixed amount; second, by declaring in the bill that this road would cost at least $30,000 per mile. Now, having made the estimate and the indorsement, did the purchaser get a vested right? If he did, can a mistake, either by the commissioners or by the Legislature, render it invalid? This question is too simple to be gravely submitted, and it but resolves itself, like the most technicalities pleaded, into evanescent diminution.

The holder of a bond indorsed under the act of the Legislature, is in no way bound by the errors of officials, and while there is not a technicality that could be pleaded that would rise to the dignity of a defence, still each one can be fairly met and answered by the facts of this case. And the estimate of the Legislature that the road would cost $30,000 per mile, and fixing the sum to be indorsed at $15,000 per mile, was a decision within the constitutional competency of the Legislature to make, and when made, and the bond was executed and passed for valuable consideration into the hands of a bona fide holder, there is not a court in Christendom but would render the law to enforce the payment to the holder.

A good many of the presses have articles upon the amount of money "half a million," which has been or will be spent to induce the Legislature to pay what the call "bogus or fraudulent bonds." Will the same presses advocate the opening of the courts to test the question whether these bonds are "bogus or fraudulent". This will prevent any influence being used but the law and the facts, and why not let the question be settled by law as to the truth of lids as oft repeated and so unfounded assertion. If the bonds are bogus and fraudulent, I oppose their payment out and out. The State is not bound to pay on "forged or fraudulent bonds," neither should "thieves" be paid—never, with my consent or on any compromise. But to cry "thief and fraud," while we hold over three millions of money in the State advanced upon bonds issued under authority of the Legislature and indorsed by the State Treasurer, and sealed with the seal of the State, and the bonds of the Brunswick and Albany Railroad Company, hereafter guaranteed by the State of Georgia by the indorsement of the Treasurer thereon under the act hereby will not recognize fraudulent and illegal Bonds." But I do say it is a principle of vast importance that this Bank will not recognize legal and valid Bonds.

He says without discrimination that these Bonds are fraudulent and illegal." I say that with discrimination they are valid and legal. Is not the question of such "vast importance" that it should be lifted above controversy and submitted to the dispassionate adjudication of the courts. If the State feels assured that these bonds are fraudulent and illegal why shun judicial investigation. The effect is injurious to the State, it has the appearance of want of confidence in her position, it produces the impression abroad that the State is afraid of the question. We might find perhaps the reason of the State in refusing to test the question, in the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States on a series of decisions which we have referred to, have held bonds to be commercial paper, and the Supreme Court of this State, Chief Justice Lumpkin, delivering the opinion, held 'A bank note, though stolen, becomes the property of him who gives valuable consideration for it, and becomes the property of him who gives valuable consideration for it having no notice or knowledge of the robbery 1 Barrow 139., so that when the bills got into circulation "by stupendous folly or stupendous fraud" the innocent holder is entitled to collect the bills on the bank, with these decisions it would be in the language of Mr. Hill "exceedingly awkward" to defend bonds issued under an act of the Legislature bearing the great seal of the State, upon furnished road in the hands of holders who paid full value for bonds, with the reelection of the three departments of the government, and the Legislative declaration that it was a contract.

The reliance on the "Floyd acceptance case" would scarcely bear the application of an argument, for in that case there was no authority of law for the acceptance, but the act was forbidden by law, 1829, 3 state at large 733 act May 1, 1830, March 3, 1861.

In this case the power was expressly granted by law, and even that decision was weakened by the partisan declaration that Floyd had done the act fraudulently to embarrass the Government," and by the further fact that three of the ablest judges presiding dissented. In this difference, however, truth was eliminated and the principle of liability announced that covers the case. "Whenever the United States accepts the articles sold, or receive other benefits from such contract, there is an implied promise to pay according to their value. This doctrine rests upon general principle of equity and justice." The Legislature in refusing to open the courts to test of the question may have very naturally presumed that as the State had over three millions of dollars expended in this State upon the contract had 173 miles of railroad built that increased the taxable property over two millions, and had been released from a claim of several million more, and from iron lying on her own road. That Courts might have thought that there was "some benefit" the State had received, and under the trust the State assumed there was a "general principle of justice and equity," to imply a promise to pay which courts would enforce, as a consideration for the contract. But it would trespass on time to review the authorities. Law belongs more properly to the court house. I only briefly refer to the general doctrine to illustrate the justice of testing these questions in the proper forum. And I have only been induced to say this much here to demonstrate that we hold no illegal bonds—never had any, and defy the world to make good the contrary before the only tribunal competent to decide—the courts of the country.

On what ground does the whole defense of repudiation rest? "A catalogue of assumptions," taken to be true every line, word and letter of which is stubbornly denied with the most indignant asseveration.

No, not to collect every dollar on every bond. Will the State of Georgia ever draw from the bondholder the confession that his bonds on finished roads are "bogus or fraudulent." They stand upon the facts and the law, and while they may be cheated, they will not lower ther crest to any power on earth as to the justice of their demands.

NEW JERSEY.

TRENTON, March 5.—The general railroad bill came up this evening for final action.

Mr. Ward addressed the House in favor of the bill.

The vote was taken and every member of the House, except two who were absent, voted in favor of the bill. The House was so jubilant that the members voted a recess of fifteen minutes to give vent to their feelings. Cheers were given by the members in the lobby by the lobbies in favor of the first general railroad law in New Jersey.

Cheers were also given for Hon. Augustus C. Cassidy, of Morris, who introduced the bill. When the House was again called to order a resolution was introduced and passed requesting the Quartermaster General to furnish a band of music and to fire a hundred guns in honor of the event.

MARYLAND.

COPPER MANUFACTURERS.

BALTIMORE, March 5.—Representatives of a number of the Copper Manufacturing Associations of New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Maryland, held their annual meeting in this city to-day, which was private, but it is understood that they resolved to make no change in the price of manufactured copper at present, on account of the continued high prices of the raw material.

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—There is much speculation relative to the Cabinet founded on the mere report that recently the members of it have formally tendered their resignations, thus necessitating new nominations to the Senate. The question about the Cabinet, however, was settled last fall, soon after the re-election of President Grant.

At a Cabinet meeting all the members being present, they informed him they wishing to do nothing, whatever to embarrass him in his administration they would tender resignations to take effect on the 4th of March ensuing. The President expressed his thanks for their friendly feelings and informed them that he had no desire for any to withdraw, but preferred they should all remain, as nothing had since occurred to change the position of affairs. The only immediate change will be in the Secretary of the Treasury, should the present incumbent be elected to the Senate of the United States. The opinion is that the President need not re nominate the members, for confirmation by the Senate is strengthened by the fact that all of them were at their respective departments to-day attending to their official duties, and it is said by gentlemen in executive positions, that no such nominations will be made.

GENERAL W. M. WADLEY and Judge John P. King, both distinguished railroad magnates are in the city.

MAJOR W. B. COX, we regret to learn, is confined to his room by a severe attack of muscular rheumatism.

THE rumor that the mechanics of the Georgia and State Roads contemplate a strike, we learn, is not true.

"COME, gentle Spring! etherial mildness, come!" In other words, we have had enough cold weather fooling round here.

MEALS are served at all hours of the day or night, of the best the market affords at Thompson's Restaurant.

Dr. Joseph Thompson a few days since fell down the steps of his piazza and sustained severe injury by the fall.

THE trains on the State Road were detained yesterday for several hours by a slight run off of a car. No damage done.

COL. THOMAS M. ACTON has been confined at home by indisposition during this week. We hope to see his "obese majesty" soon on the go.

COME LIVE WITH ME AND BE MY LOVE Mr. Cooper has a fine new lot of licenses up at the Clerk's office at the City Hall. Young man, go prevail on some young lady to let you have one filled out.

IMPORTANT MEETING TO-NIGHT.—The Chamber of Commerce meet to-night in their hall in the Republic Block. We trust every member will be out. The subject of manufactures is a vital one.

CANNON HOUSE.—This excellent house is situated on Marietta street, in the Gate City Block. Board $2 per day. The table is supplied with the best the market affords, and the accommodations are ample.

W. R. Rankin, late of the Calhoun Times, we learn has entered on the practice of the law in that town and will devote his exclusive attention to the profession. Success to him and may he attain the front rank in the profession.

THERE was a pretty strong smell of guano in some localities yesterday. Some persons seem to be profoundly ignorant of the physiological fact, that man carries a pair of lungs beneath his ribs fitted only to inspire oxygen and nitrogen in their purity.

COMMON SENSE.

CLAYTON SUPERIOR COURT.—We learn that Judge Hopkins is despatching business very rapidly at Clayton Superior Court. Solicitor General Glenn is very active and energetic in the discharge of his duties. Quite a number have been convicted of various offences. The negro Gammell was found guilty of committing a rape on the person of a little white girl, and sentenced to the penitentiary for twenty years.

WILD TURKEY.—This writer examined a turkey on yesterday, which from the end of its bill to the tip of its tail measured fifty inches, across its back from the end of one wing to the other, sixty-five inches. Beard, nine inches long. Weight twenty pounds. Where was it?

On the table with all kinds of meats,
And butter colored like gold,
And many things in grand array,
That speak of pleasures untold,

At Tim Murphy's.

COMING TO THE RACES.—A few days since a poster was scattered along the line of the Georgia Road announcing that a race would take place Tuesday and that parties of six or more would be transported by the railroads for one fare. The place was not named. At a town not fifty miles from Atlanta a party was gotten up to come to Atlanta. The way freight came along without a cab, but bitter cold as it was, the party came up in an open car. Imagine their chagrin on their arrival to find that the race was in Augusta. "The army swore terribly in Flanders," but nothing in comparison with these irate gentlemen It won't do to mention "races" to them since.

Atlanta Medical College.

At the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees of this institution, Mr. John H. James and R. F. Maddox, of Atlanta, and Dr. A. B. Calhoun, of Newnan, were elected members of the Board. These elections were to fill the vacancies caused by the removal of Dr. W. T. Brantley, the death of Dr. J. N. Simmons, and the resignation of Dr. R. D. Moore, of Athens.

We learn the course of lectures just concluded has been a most successful one, gratifying alike to the faculty and the students. There were ninety-three students in attendance. This is the largest class present since the war—larger, indeed, than any in the State, if not in the South, since that period.

NEGLECTED STREETS.—The more a street is neglected by the municipal authorities, the more will it be neglected by those who inhabit it. If a street be kept clean, there is a hope that the dwellers therein will follow the cleanly example. Dirt and impurity involve fearful consequences. It costs more not to have paved streets, drains, and sewers, than to have these conveniences. This writer knows a street not far off worn into ruts and holes, in which water stagnates, and another part of it is neglected and piles of dirt, rubbish and trash are consequently piled up on the side of the street and sidewalk, and this offends the eye and endangers health.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.—A meeting of the Olive Branch, K. O. P., was held last evening at eight o'clock, and elected the following officers for the ensuing term, ending July 1st, 1873:

P. C.—John M. Palmer.
C. C.—M. M. Ballsario.
V. C.—A. Hass.
V. P.—H. B. Blackisford.

M. of F.—J. F. Simmons.
K. of R. and S.—W. O. Halve.
M. of A.—D. A. O'Conner.
Inner Guard—S. Selig.
Outer Guard—D. E. Ritchie.

The Olive Branch Lodge will be instituted next Wednesday evening by Grand Chancellor Woodruff, of Macon, Georgia. After this a collation will be had at the Kimball House.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A Radical Change Proposed.

"Let Well Enough Alone."

An ordinance (which we gave yesterday) has been introduced in Council proposing radical changes in our Public School System.

With one trenchant blow it proposes to wipe out the well-digested ordinance on that subject and substitute another in its place.

It provides that there shall be two members of the Board of Education elected by the Council for six years. They are now elected—four for two years, four for four years and four for six years Wisdom and experience teaches all familiar with education, that the last is much the best plan.

The next change is in the words following: "Said Board of Education shall have the control and management of the Public Schools of the city, subject to the approval of the Mayor and Council as hereinafter provided. They shall also have authority to fix the compensation of the Superintendent and teachers, subject to the approval of the Mayor and Council."

This last change virtually makes the Board consist of twenty-seven men instead of twelve—and fifteen a majority of it, little convenient with the subject.

If it is adopted, we can see no necessity for the additional twelve men. Let the Council discharge all the duties!

The Board of Education comprises some of our heaviest tax payers, who have devoted time and thought to the subject. Are such men as Joseph E. Brown, Joseph P. Logan, L. P. Grant, R. J. Lowry, L. N. Hunnicutt, David Wight, John H. Flynn and their associates incapable of judging correctly as to what the services of the Superintendent and teachers are worth? And are the members of Council, who, harassed by cries for crossings and street improvements, have little time to devote to the subject, better qualified to judge?

The system is a good one, and is acknowledged to be so by practical educators who have witnessed its workings. If it has failed to accomplish the results anticipated it is not the fault of the system or the Board of Education. They have expended the money economically and judiciously. They are better calculated to do so than any one else, because of their experience and knowledge. The total cost of the schools to January 1, 1873, is put down at $113,089 58. Of this amount the Board spent in round numbers $68,000 and the City Council $65,000. Buildings, furniture and rents absorb the $65,000.

For this sum of $68,000, two thousand eight hundred and forty-two children were taught exactly what under the old system it cost to teach only 1,200 not quite half the number. Compared with the old system, it is a saving of $64,000. Under the present wise system, and the economical management of the Board of Education, more than double the number of children has been taught and the amount saved by the Council for half-dues saved. For it must be confessed that under the old system, either 1643 children would receive no instruction, or that the sum of $113,000 would have to be expended for tuition.

Another change is that of paying the indebtedness of the schools. It forces bills to pass through a long routine, and at last are paid in city checks.

The framers of the ordinance do not, perhaps, know the dangers of the proposed changes. By increasing the Board, and dividing its responsibilities, they weaken and impair the system. Disguise the matter as they may, whether designed or not, the effect of the proposed ordinance will be to subvert and break down the system entirely. The present system holds itself aloof from politics and sectarianism. All know that already the duties and responsibilities of a member of Council are arduous, and to fill it acceptably will be honor enough.

The whole matter of the management of the schools was left to the Board of Education. Council's sole duty was to raise the amount required to run the schools and the Board would disburse the amount and report to Council. The Board was selected with great circumspection. They have borrowed money on their own credit to run the schools, because, from their knowledge and experience, they know the absolute necessity of paying the salaries of teachers in cash. Suppose, now, the ordinance is passed. The Board of Education resigns. Council undertakes to run the machine. Teachers have to be examined: salaries affixed; Alderman X. has a friend who controls so many votes and must be provided for; Ald. Z. likewise has another friend to be provided for; both cannot be appointed and a compromise is effected by making a position for one of them. Checks are paid for salaries and get so numerous that teachers sick for an increase. One by one the best teachers drop off and the whole system fails.

Are the members of Council better financiers or more deeply interested in the welfare of Atlanta than the Board of Education? Some of the best financiers are members of the Board. Are the members of Council more heavily taxed and less benefitted by the system, than the members of the Board?

The Board pays as a school tax $1 093 60 about $1,400 more than the entire members of Council; one member of the Board of Education alone pays more school tax than the entire council and he doesn't send a child to the Public Schools. While we are writing this a gentleman in our sanctum informs us that he pays $441 school tax and sends his children to private schools, but, he thinks the money well invested.

What is the result of the present system? Two thousand eight hundred and forty two children have been taught at an expense of $113,000. Under the old system the same amount would have been expended, without erecting a single school house.

Members of Council should pause and reflect ere they break down and destroy a system that has worked so well and produced such brilliant results. Especially should they pause when the people do not demand it, and there exists no necessity for it.

If this change is seriously contemplated, as we trust it is not, the people will expect the right accorded to them of voting on the proposition.

SUPREME COURT, Atlanta, March 5, 1873.

CHATTAHOOCHEE CIRCUIT.

Argument of motion to dismiss the cases in which the late Wm. Dougherty, Esq, was interested, resumed and concluded.

No 1. The Eagle Manufacturing Company, et al, vs Charles Wise, Relief Act, from Muscogee. Argued. Henry L Benning, for plaintiff in error. Peabody & Branson, contra.

No 2. Swift, Murphy & Co. vs Mary F McLemore Certiorari, from Muscogee. Argued. Peabody & Branson, for plaintiffs in error. James M Russell, contra.

No 4. T W Branson, vs Jno J Great, et al. Equity, from Muscogee. Argued. Cary J Thornton, for plaintiff in error. Blandford & Crawford, contra.

No 5. Park & Iverson vs the Fiedmont and Arlington Life Insurance Company. Case, from Muscogee. R J Moses, M H Blanford, L T Downing, for plaintiffs in error. Ingram & Crawford, contra.

At the conclusion of the argument of R J Moses, Esq, the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock A. M. tomorrow.

Fulton Superior Court.

The Clerk of the Superior Court asks us to inform the public in general, and our lawyers in particular, that next Tuesday, the 11th day of March, will be return day for the April term of the above Court. Attorneys, and all others interested will do well to take notice.

The United States District Court.

This tribunal met yesterday morning at ten o'clock, the Hon. John Erskine, United States District Judge for the Northern District of Georgia, presiding.

There was no business of any public interest transacted during the day's session, which was chiefly passed in considering and granting orders, and preparing cases for final trial.

Upon the written application of Morris Adler, Esq., being sick, and upon his giving the requisite certificate and evidence of good moral character, and of his desire to become a citizen of the United States, an order was passed by the Court granting petitioners request, and adding one more to the population of this so-called Republic.

The case of Lowenstein & Pfiefer, a case in Bankruptcy, was set down for a hearing to-day.

Court then adjourned until ten o'clock this morning.

United States Commissioners' Court.

The nine prisoners, from Union county, whose name and offence were given in the last edition of THE CONSTITUTION, after consultation with their counsel, concluded to waive a hearing before Commissioner W. H. Smith and gave the required appearance bonds.

A man named W. B. Calhoun was arrested yesterday on the road near Chamberville. It appears that he had in his wagon a quantity of whisky, carefully stored away, on or which was unpaid the internal revenue tax. He was brought down to Atlanta and Commissioner Smith gave him a hearing yesterday afternoon. The case was still on trial at a late hour.

The City Courts.

This body met in its room at the City Hall yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, Judge Robert J. Guyer presiding.

Only one case was tried. The State vs. William Mell, larceny and battery. The offence was alleged to have been committed on the 21st day of February, 1873, upon the person of Henry Johnson. The prisoner was tried by the Court and found guilty. He was sentenced to pay a fine $10 and costs, or go to the chain-gang for three months.

As no other cases were ready for trial, Court adjourned over to 9 o'clock next Monday morning.

U. S. Marshal's Sale.

UNDER AND BY VIRTUE OF A DECREE rendered out of the Honorable the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Georgia, in favor of the Plaintiff, Chas. N. Featherstone, Assignee, vs. P. M. Shelley and Davis Gammage, in the following case, to-wit:

Chas. N. Featherstone, Assignee, versus P. M. Shelley and Davis Gammage,

Sterling's Southern Series

Readers, Orators & Copy Books.

THE undersigned now own the plates of this POPULAR SERIES; and as they are the only Purely Southern School Books offered to the market, we submit that it is to the interest of Teachers to patronize them. Send for circulars of Special Terms to Teachers.—VERY LIBERAL. Specimen copies sent free for examination.

Prof. ORR, the Superintendent of Education for Georgia, says of them:

ATHENS, GA., W. Burke & Co., Macon, Ga.—GENTLEMEN: I have given to the Sterling Series of School Books, which you have had the kindness to leave with me, such examination as the limited amount of leisure at my command has allowed. With portions of books of the series I was already familiar, having added greatly to the interest of several public exhibitions, while engaged in active school work, by selections from their pages. While there ought not to be anything offensively sectional in our school literature, it must be allowed to say that it is with feelings of both pleasure and pride that I find in the pages of these books so liberal a recognition of Southern talent. I am glad, too, to learn that their publication is to be transferred to our own State. Southern independence will be secured, achieved by politicians, so far as possible, every necessary for the supply of all our wants, both material and mental, upon our own soil. I will only add that I would be pleased to see the books extensively used.

Respectfully yours,
GUSTAVUS J. ORR,
State School Commissioner.

JAMES A. JACKSON & Co.—I have examined the formula for making the "Home Stomach Bitters," and used them in this hospital the last four months. I consider them the most valuable and efficient remedy now in use.

R. M. MELCHER,
Resident Physician in charge U. S. Marine Hospital.

JAMES A. JACKSON & Co.—Gentlemen: As you have communicated to the medical profession the receipt of the "Home Stomach Bitters," it is unnecessary for me to say that it is a purely medicine, no patent having been taken for it. We have examined the formula for making the "Home Bitters," and unhesitatingly say the combination is one of rare excellence, all the articles used in its composition are the best of the class to which they belong, being highly Tonic, Stimulant, Stomachic, Carminative, and slightly Laxative. The mode of preparing them is entirely in accordance with the rules of pharmacy. Having used them in our private practice, we take pleasure in recommending them to all persons desirous of taking Home, as being the best Tonic and Stimulant now offered to the public.

THE DAILY CONSTITUTION

WEAL AND WOE.

When the day is fair the bird is out
To carol songs with its mate,
Or frost beslim the lily's eye,
Your gay plumed songster heeds you not,
The flow'ret droops alone—forgot.
The vine that yields its grateful store
Is twined with gentle hands,
The dog that guards the cottage door
Is fed while lambs in flocks
But when the storm-king's grim jackets are donned
The shrinking birdlet with ne'ades twain,
And let harm hush the watch-dog's cry,
Neglected them he's left to die.

The war-horse firm in battle's storm
Becomes his master's pride,
The oak that shades the arman's form
His charms in summertide;
But let a wheedling flatterer speed,
His rider gone he's left to bleed:
And let cold winter chill the oak,
T is first to feel the arman's stroke.

The friend with music in his voice
To cheer you with his lay,
While weal betides you will rejoice
And sweetly chant the day;
But let the sombre morton come
And pluck th' unpaid your happy home,
His music's hushed - his lay is o'er—
He knows you not—your friend no more.

The while your teeming board is spread
Alone you never bide,
The while your stomach sits shieldly his head
Man's praise spreads far and wide;
But let misfortune blast your store,
Rouvainly pass at pearly's door,
Or let your strong arm withered fall,
Man's gratitude is turned to gall.

Oh, thus it is while fortune shines
And fame her clarion rings,
Around the hall sweet friendship twines
And love his nectar brings;
But when the blaze of Fortune's sun
Is quenched and Fame's sweet song is done,
Alone you're left in pain to lie
Contemned—unheeded there to die.

THE GIRL OF THE PERIOD.

How She Acts in the Horse Car.

She stands upon the curb with a little springy, up-and-down motion, as if she had spiral springs in the soles of her gaiters. As her car approaches she slicks the point of her colored parasol in the direction of the driver with a small jerk. The car stops. She gives one or two more little springy motions before she leaves the pavement, and then dances to the car.

As she ascends the step the conductor seems to consider it absolutely necessary to her safety to place one of his hands on the small of her back while he rings the bell with the other. She enters the car with the spiral springs still bobbing her up and down; and, as all the seats are full, she stands holding her hands in front of her and gazing off into limitless space, as if the one idea which never enters her mind, and which never could enter it under any possible circumstances, is that some man will rise and offer her his seat. But a young man in the corner does rise, and immediately the fellow next to him moves quickly into the corner, as if the performance of that maneuver had formed the subject of his anxious thought during many years of his life.

To get a corner seat would seem to be the chief end of man.

When the young man rises, the young lady suddenly becomes conscious that there is something nearer to her than the horizon, and she gives two or three more lithe bounces and says:

"Keep your seat!" The young man is embarrassed, and says he is going to get out soon, whereupon the fair being dances toward the seat, sinks into it, and pretends that the face of the existence of any young man who once occupied that seat, and who is going to get out, has entirely faded out of her consciousness. She smoothes down her dress and its supplemental fribbery, flounces and pennants, and again looks far beyond the confines of the car into emptiness.

She knows she is expected by the other women in the car to remain unconscious of their presence while they study her clothes. They immediately begin. They stare at her dress, her sack, her hat, her back hair, her jewelry, her gloves, her bows and ribbons, her miscellaneous millinery, until the entire costume is photographed in their memories, and the price estimated, and a critical opinion formed, with a resolution to have a bonnet of the same kind, or a "body" cut upon the same pattern.

When the young lady thinks that this examination is concluded, she becomes conscious again, and begins to look around and see how the other women are dressed. She examines each one in detail, and in a few moments she is in full possession of the necessary information.

Presently a young man with whom she is acquainted gets into the car, and he stands clutching the strap and trying in vain to keep in a graceful attitude while he converses with her. All the women begin to wonder whether she cares particularly for him—and, as she knows their thoughts, she is so distant that the young man becomes more embarrassed than ever, and makes renewed struggles to maintain a graceful position. When she wishes to get out she rises, smoothes down her fribbery again, indulges in two or three springs, and dances along the platform.

The conductor again considers it imperatively necessary to press the small of her back. She dances down the steps, dances to the pavement, and then dances along the street, fully aware of the fact that the women in the car have all turned round to look at her, and serenely confident in the assurance that she has on good clothes, which fit her splendidly. As she disappears the conductor turns to the man who is smoking a cigar on the platform, and remarks that she is "a crusher."

☞ News from Bombay is to the effect that in no previous year has the cotton crop of that section promised such excellent results. Unless some unforseen accidents should destroy whole fields of cotton, the shipments from Bombay during 1873, will aggregate not less than 1,250,000 bales—namely, an increase of more than a quarter of a million bales above last year's shipments. Great attention is being given to the culture of cotton in India, and that accounts for the heavy increase of the staple. As it can now be shipped to France and England through the Suez Canal, instead of around the Cape of Good Hope, the profits to all parties are greater, and that fact will stimulate India to still greater efforts in that field of native production.—Exchange.

☞ A certain doctor, who sometimes drank a good deal at dinner, was summoned one evening to see a lady patient whom he was more than "half seas over," and conscious that he was so. On feeling her pulse and finding himself unable to count its beats, he muttered, "Drunk, by Jove!" Next morning, recollecting the circumstances, he was greatly vexed, and, just as he was thinking what explanation he should offer to the lady, a letter was put in his hand. "She too well knew," said the latter, "what he had discovered the unfortunate condition in which she was in when he visited her;" and she entreated him to keep the matter a secret, in consideration of the enclosed—a hundred dollar bill.

CREDIT MOBILIER—HOW THEY PRONOUNCE IT.—The Boston Herald says:

Our Washington correspondent, in order to acquaint the public with the most approved method of pronouncing the name of the somewhat famous Credit Mobilier, sends the following as a trustworthy guide. You pays your money and you takes your choice:

John B. Alley—Credit Mo-beel-yia.
Judge Poland—Credit Mo-bil-air.
Oakes Ames—Credit Mo-bil-ay.
Gen. Banks—Credit Mo-bil-ly-a.
Sidney Dillon—Credit Mo-bil-eer.
Senator Stevenson—Cred-dy Mo-bil-ee.

☞ One day in spring, Sir Walter Scott strolled forth with Lady Scott to enjoy a walk around Abbotsford. In their wanderings they passed a field where a number of ewes were enduring the frolics of their lambs. "'Tis no wonder the poets, from the earliest ages, have made the lamb the emblem of peace and innocence." "They are indeed, delightful animals," returned her ladyship, "especially with mint sauce."

☞ A traveller in Spain describes a scene which he witnessed in a gambling saloon in Madrid. The sound of a little bell was heard in the street announcing the procession of the host to the house of a sick person. Instantly cards and dice were thrown down, and every gambler was on his knees in perfect silence till the procession had passed by, when all resumed their places and their play.

☞ A physician, on presenting his bill to the estate of a deceased patient, asked, Do you wish to have my bill sworn to?" "No," replied the executor; "the death of the deceased is sufficient evidence that you attended him professionally."

☞ The Chicago Times put the following conundrum: "How can we escape Hell?" The New York Commercial Advertiser answers: "The gospel offers you every encouragement, but perhaps your 'best hold' is to get out of Chicago."

AVERT THE DANGER.—The "ethereal mildness" with which poets credit the vernal season is more an illusion of the fancy than a meteorological fact. Early spring in temperate climates is a tearful time, and the tears are usually too cool for health or comfort. To avert the complaints to which the fogs and winds of the season are apt to give rise, prudent people who believe in the proverb that "prevention is better than cure" fortify their stomachs and brace up their nerves and muscles with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Those who do this are wise, and are rewarded for their wisdom by escaping the visitations of chills and fever, rheumatism, biliousness, flatulency, constipation, stomach complaint, etc., so common in damp, inhospitable weather. To the less prudent, who neglect this precaution, and suffer for it, we would say that the disorders which this potent vegetable tonic prevents it also cures.
